

REGIONAL TRIPARTITE CONSULTATIONS ON OLD-AGE INCOME SECURITY IN WEST JAVA AND CENTRAL JAVA

Terms Of Reference

1. Background

Old-age income security schemes has been one of the government's reform priorities. Existing schemes include Jaminan Pensiun (JP), Jaminan Hari Tua (JHT), social insurance for the armed forces and police (ASABRI), and saving and social insurance for civil servant (TASPEN), with total active participants of around 21 million or 15% of total labour force of 136 million people.¹

Indonesian policymakers have been debating options for the establishment of a comprehensive old age income security system that promotes certainty, adequacy, coverage, and sustainability. Subjects of ongoing discussions include integration of JHT and severance pay into JP, obligation of civil servants, the police, and armed forces to participate in JP in addition to ASABRI and TASPEN, and establishment of a universal pension scheme.

The social protection programme of the ILO Country Office for Indonesia and Timor Leste has been supporting the government in this endeavor by providing inputs through studies and meetings. To facilitate discussions with the government institutions and social partners at district, provincial, and national levels, the social protection programme, in collaboration with Ministry of National Development and Planning, and Ministry of Manpower is organizing series of tripartite consultations.

2. Objective

The consultations aim to:

- Share elderly's challenges in securing income in their old-age
- Share policy direction for old-age income security system reform
- Present applicable international standards and practices
- Present different reform options for old-age income security reform
- Facilitate dialogues among the tripartite constituents and experts on reform options to meet the objective of promoting certainty, adequacy, coverage, and sustainability of old age income security system
- Facilitate the issuance of a joint statement on old-age income security reform option

3. Date and Venue

The consultations will be organized in Bandung and Solo on 12-14 June and 2-4 August 2023, respectively, covering the provinces of West Java, Banten, Central Java and Yogyakarta.
